THE DUTY OF THE CITIZEN.

Very seldom do we find in the remarks of the eccentric Brooklyn preacher Talmage sentences that move us to their reproduction. But in a recent note in a magazine he gives expression to one that we feel inclined to rescue from magazine obscurity, and transfer to the world of daily journalism. He said: "There is something melancholy in the chase for office, when we reflect that the vast majority must come to disappointment. The same amount of struggle in some straightforward business would give a man a surer livelihood, easier conscience and higher respectability." All which is well enough and true in one sense, and very pointedly put. But there is insufficient justification for the sweeping charge with which he follows it up. "To be a successful politician, in our day, so much lying and stealing and bribery are considered necessary, that generally by the time a man has been ten or fifteen years in politics he has no more principle to surrender." The tendency of the "machine" in politics is vicious—professional office-seeking is demoralizing. But to class all successful politicians as unprincipled is without warrant in reason or fact. All citizens should be politicians, and in one sense successful ones. They should take an interest in public affairs, intelligently, shrewdly and vigorously so. They should manifest the same concern in the selection of officials and the establishment of the policy of the country and in the welfare of the masses that the conscientious ruler in a monarchy should, who feels his responsibility and does not delegate his powers to the unprincipled class, for here the citizen is the ruler, and the aggregate judgment of citizens forms the edict of the only sovereign we recognize. Rightly viewed and rightly pursued, then, political action, policies and contests being a necessity in our form of government, should be engaged in by every true citizen. Politics should form a part of his study—he cannot afford to permit a class in which he has no confidence to usurp his right in this respect, or to absorb his privilege. The citizens whose integrity is such a delicate character that they dare not become active in the political field for fear their white robes may be soiled, and who will not act with those who deem politics a part of the governmental system demanding the thought, attention and control of the conscientious, are of the class that will, when occasion offers, manifest viciousness and dishonesty in any walk, and do not need the opportunities political activity affords to become pronounced scoundrels. We invariably suspect the citizen of insincerity, who declares that the fifty pool of politics is too miry for "him." If it is foul, it is his bounden duty to bend his energies to its purification, and no other agency will accomplish it. Because the temptations in political life are very great, because the vicious and unprincipled avail of the opportunities offered, because the professional office-seekers make politics a trade and sink self-respect and principles in the baseness, are precisely the reasons why a lofty standard of citizenship should be set up, and every effort made on the part of non-professional politicians to sustain it. We want open, honest, courageous engagement in politics by men who realize that the State has some claim upon them, and that to it they owe a solemn duty which is continuing and never to be discharged. By such, machine politics may be reduced to the minimum of infidelity, the vicious and the unprincipled be driven into obscurity or compelled to acknowledge the power and domination of the right-thinking and sincere. The men who are so pure and so fearful of contamination that they must needs withdraw themselves from politics and leave the field to the professional, the boss and the manipulator, are the men who are primarily and finally responsible for the degradation of politics, and whatever of evil that consequences may be visited upon the country. At least, if the majority is vicious and wrong-headed, as Mr. Arnold would have us believe, it is all the more incumbent that the pure remnant should buckle on the armor and enter the lists in resistance of the evil—and for that minority politics have no contaminating influence.

"What we really want in politics," in short, "is the gentleman," said Dr. Holland years ago. "If our political men were only gentlemen, and if they were no more than ordinarily intelligent, we should find our political affairs in a good condition and the great questions that stand before us in a fair way of being properly adjusted. A gentleman is a person who knows something of the world; who possesses dignity and self-respect; who recognizes the rights of others and the duties he owes to society in all its relations; who would as soon commit suicide as stain his palm with a bribe; who would not degrade himself by intrigues. There are various types of the gentleman, and the higher the type the better the politician." And let us add for this day, that there are now, as there always have been, gentlemen in politics; men who enter the political field pure, and remain in it clean, despite the temptations that assail them, but which are, after all, not so very much greater than are manifest in other affairs—all we need is more such men to come out and engage in the political action of the day. There is nothing prefatory to the ballot; the good citizen does not permit the vicious and scoundrel class to make up the tickets and content himself with choosing between evils on election day; on the contrary, he gives his influence to the proper shaping of matters before election, that he may have nothing with which to reproach himself after election.

GETTING THINGS "IN SHAPE."

It is seriously believed that an era of bulldozing is again to be entered upon. A negro citizen jostled a white citizen at Danville, Va. He apologized; another man rebuked him; a pistol was drawn; a riot followed, and the result was a shooting down of five negroes, a riot and the declaration of martial law on the eve of an election, and the non-appearance of the negroes at the polls. Of course there was some wrong on the negro side, but it had not appeared that it was during the rebellion; that the heirs were living in Virginia; that they relied on the assurance of Weller, the co-trustee of Gray & Weller, that they were safe. The negroes had a right to be protected, and the administration had done all it could for them.

Fruit-growers' Convention.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 20th.—The third annual convention of the Fruit Growers of California, conducted under the auspices of the State Board of Horticultural Commissioners, opened the morning at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce at 11 o'clock. The convention will last three days. A great deal of interest was manifested in the proceedings, many of the speakers being from different parts of the State, and represented the various fruit-growing districts.

The chair selected the following: On permanent organization—Messrs. Haines, Johnston, Cooke, Hatch and De Long. On orders of business—Messrs. Dwinnell, West, Buck and Michie.

Some discussion then ensued as to permanent organization and order of business. A motion was made to appoint a committee to perform both offices, but this was amended by Mr. Chapman to authorize the Chair to appoint a committee of three.

On motion of Prof. Hilgard, the Chief Executive Horticultural Officer of the State, Matthew Cooke was appointed on temporary service.

The chair selected the following: On permanent organization—Messrs. Haines, Johnston, Cooke, Hatch and De Long. On orders of business—Messrs. Dwinnell, West, Buck and Michie.

The convention then took a recess until 1 o'clock.

Upon reassembling, E. J. Wickson, president of the State Board of Horticultural Commissioners, called the Committee to order. He briefly stated his object to be the discussion of the best methods of fruit cultivation, the destruction of enemies of fruit, and the reading of papers on those subjects, and the adoption of a temporary constitution.

Prof. E. W. Hilgard, of the University, but he declined, owing to physical inability, to hold the chair, and was succeeded by Prof. E. J. McFie, director of the State Board of Horticulture.
